

Above, the time honored method of getting goods to market, or home. A look at part of Lagos, from a distance, then a car dealer, up close, complete with vegetable stand in front, in the parking lot.

Photo Gallery: Lagos

My Friends Ade Martins and Dudun Peterside just after we finished the two day workshop. Below is in the restaurant, where I'm presenting to a group of about 45 business leaders. It was a fun evening, as well as quite packed and quite challenging. Intelligent, attentive and inquisitive.

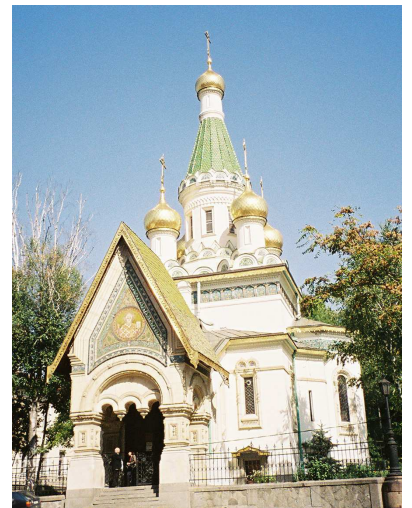

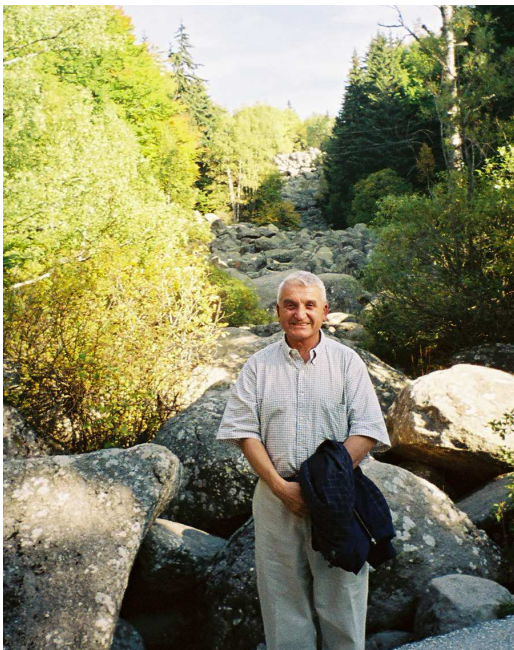

Photo Gallery: Romania

Catalin and I in a strange ancient town with wonderful sights. The Church behind me is in close-up below. Notice the clock and it's workings, seen from the tower inside. These towns are all through the countryside in Transylvania. One of the most interesting places in the world, to be sure.

Photo Gallery: Bulgaria

Christo, out in the countryside of Bulgaria, on the "Golden River" named because of the gold flecks in the rocks. Also, beside an ancient church, renovated in several different ages and styles. On the right is a church downtown, next to where we did our two day training program.

These are all in downtown Sofia, the beautiful capital of Bulgaria. Below, a magnificent church interior. Next to that, I'm standing in front of the main cathedral. Lower right shows one of the fascinating facts of life in ancient cities: an old ruin excavation in the courtyard of a modern office building. It continues to the basement and subway beneath, as an exhibit in the midst of the life of the town.

This block long building to the right above, now an art museum, was a communist era headquarters building.

